

YERALDIN

BRAND KIT · 2026

The drawn line describing the natural world

You draw flowers, buildings, figures and plans. You work in land development, where the product is a plat — a measured drawing of ground, its boundaries and contours in fine lines with labelled dimensions. A botanical plate is a measured drawing of a plant. An elevation is a measured drawing of a building.

It is one act, not three. That is the brand: a practice you already have, and one almost nobody can claim honestly in both of your worlds.

And the register

Antioquian old money — European heritage transplanted into tropical botany. Dark carved wood and French windows, leather-bound books and lime-washed walls, a tiled patio with a garden behaving like a jungle. Colonial bones, European furniture, orchids growing over all of it.

Always

- Patina over polish
- Green light filtered through leaves
- Handwriting, pressed things, dates
- Orchids and heliconias, not roses

Never

- Gold, marble, anything shiny
- The mark repeated as a pattern
- Naming the thing you want noticed
- The word "luxury"

A flower whose inner structure is a Y

Two outer petals open from a cup. Inside the cup, two arms sweep down, meet, and continue as the stem — which is a Y, and is also exactly what a growing plant does. The letter is not applied to the flower; it is the flower's anatomy.

PRIMARY · ABOVE 48PX

SEAL · STAMP,
WATERMARK

SMALL · UNDER 48PX

Rules

- Below 48px use the Small version — the inner lines fill in otherwise
- One colour only: Tinta on Papel, or Papel on Verde
- Clear space all round equal to the bloom's height
- The mark sits above the wordmark, never beside it at large sizes

Never

- Filled, gradient, gold, outlined or shadowed
- Tiled as a repeating pattern
- Stretched, rotated, or with petals rearranged
- Placed over a busy area of a photograph

Two arrangements, and no others

STACKED · SITE HEADER, COVERS, PRINT

HORIZONTAL · NAVIGATION, EMAIL SIGNATURE, SMALL FORMATS

The wordmark is Cormorant Garamond Light, uppercase, letterspacing 0.30em. The spacing is the whole effect — never tighten it, never bold it, never add a tagline underneath.

Terracotta and money green, measured

Papel

#F5EFE4

The ground. Almost everything.

Tinta

#211C17

All text and every drawn line.

Verde

#1E4638

Filtered garden light. Covers.

Arcilla

#AF5F3E

Display 25pt+ and non-text. 4.05:1

Arcilla Hondo

#9E5031

Any text under 25pt. 5.03:1

Proportion is the discipline: roughly 70% Papel, 20% Tinta, 7% Verde, 2% Arcilla, 1% Latón. The moment Arcilla becomes a background, this turns into every other terracotta brand on the internet.

Three rules that hold it together

- Verde is a surface, never a text colour — in either theme. Text on Verde is always Papel.
- Arcilla never touches Verde — 2.28:1. Use Latón or Papel instead.
- Two accents by size: Arcilla for display and non-text, Arcilla Hondo for anything under 25pt.

Dark brand Verde #24503F · Arcilla #D08A64 · Arcilla Hondo #DB9873 · Latón #C4A778

Verified 26 pairs measured across both themes. One documented shortfall: n-300 on dark panel, 2.96 against a 3.0 target.

Two faces, four jobs

DISPLAY · CORMORANT GARAMOND LIGHT

Orchids grow best on the thing they are not

VOICE · CORMORANT ITALIC

I keep trying to hold on to the ordinary parts.

BODY · JOST LIGHT

Everything you actually read. Geometric and modern, which stops the serif tipping into nostalgia — warm words set in cool letters. That tension is the voice.

LABELS · JOST, TRACKED

The specimen label

One repeating structure on everything you publish: the thing, a hairline rule, then its name in Cormorant and its facts in tracked capitals — place, a measurement, a date. Always include a number. The number is what makes it a specimen rather than a caption, and it is the quiet link back to the work you do professionally.

The grade

- Lift the blacks — nothing reaches pure black. This is what reads as film
- Warm the highlights, cool the shadows slightly
- Drop saturation 10–15%, bring greens and terracottas back alone
- Fine grain over everything, video included
- Reference stock: Kodak Portra 400

What makes it cheap

- Saturated skies, HDR, heavy clarity on skin
- Crushed blacks, teal-and-orange
- Midday sun — shoot golden hour or overcast
- Mixing presets. One look, forever
- Half your frames should have no person in them
